THE WOMAN OF THE PEOPLE
Or The Horrors of Drink is one of those highly moral sensational pieces which send every one home with "food for thought." Considering that nothing but amateur talent, excepting the original three in the company, performed on Thursday night, great praise is due to Mr. Bandmann for his fearless and indefatigable work of putting such a piece upon the stage. We were notified of the first appearance of Miss Clare Forest, and we were agreeably surprised, not only at the appearance of this lady, but also at her performance, which, considering that this was her first appearance on any stage, was excellent. With more experience, and the ease which this brings, this lady may make her mark in the profession, for she has certainly much in her favor.

Among the other amateurs who deserve particular mention are Martha, Bertrand, Doctor Upright and the Baby, who sustained their parts well throughout. Dr. Upright was a very conscientious pompous old gentleman and held a Government position, he "gets paid by the Government, that is, when there is money in the Treasury."
Bertrand, an amateur, had a difficult part but did exceedingly well. He has good voice and appearance, had studied his part carefully, and will soon overcome the slight stiffness that was apparent on his first appearance.

Miss Beaudet, as Marie, had a most difficult part, and was almost continually before the audience, the most fastidious of whom never tire of seeing something good. This hard working little lady deserves all the praise that she has hitherto received for her representation of this character, the ruined wife of a bad husband, a difficult part to portray.

The character of Reny does not give Her Bandmann much opportunity to display his capabilities, however, he made everything possible of it, and judged tolerably correctly of most constituencies, that his "6,000 francs would gain him a seat in the Legislature," but Hawaiian voters are "honorable men," and, if running for a Honolulu constituency, we would recommend Reny to make an exchange with Cuiha of cash for gin.
